

THESDAY EVENING, MAR, 18, 1906.

SOME of the members of the legisla. throughout the State, but they must remember that they alone are resposible for such treatment. The majority of the members seem to have been reckless, extravagent and undignified men, as is shown by the following description of the closing scenes in the Senate published

The Senatorial farewell revel con tinned. At one point a Senator responding to a prod from another Senator, said something about the latter's "seeing double." The later was apparently much annoyed. He inquired if the Senator intended to insult him. "I have been in this Senate six years," he declared, "and in all that time I have never heard one Senator use such language as this, referring to another Senaother disclaimed any intention of offending the Senator, remarking upon the fact that the Senator was proceeding in a humorous vein, and declaring that his remark was made in "I reserve the right to see double without any regard to the wishes of the Senator," said the other shortly. It was again declared that no offense was intended, and the incident passed. The result of the fun-making was that no bills were passed, or, rather, fun making was resorted to because it was impos sible to get any bills through the Senate. At 11:20 p. m. the chair was vacated for twenty minutes. Three dignified Senators locked arms in a circle and waltzed around singing "Auld Lang Syne." The chorus was taken up by the others. The scene grew more lively. The Hon. "Pete" Barksdale, a former Senator, was dengged to the chair and torced to make a speech, which he did amid roars of applause. The other balf of the Halitax ex-Senator, the Hon. T. C. Pilcher, was then introduced. There were loud cries for "Button," but the fore-warned clerk had safeguarded him-selt in his room behind a locked door. The gavel fell at 11:45 p. m., and the Senate came to order again. The president signed several bills, and arranged to have a sufficient number of members present on Monday to constitute a quo-rum of the committee on enrolled bills, and then the Senate adjourned.

By all accounts from Washington the feeling appears to be gaining ground that the result of freight rate legislation in this session of Congress is going to be attended with much disappointment. The Battle of Mount Dajo.

Wood, who has returned here after the battle of Mount Dajo, where several hundred natives were exterminated by the American troops, today talked about the fight with the Moros. General Wood admitted that native women and child-ren were killed in the engagement, and while he deplored the fact, he said i was unavoidable because the women fought side by side with the men and More children were used as shields by the warriors. The Moros in the fight, General Wood declared, were absolutely fanatical. Even the men of the ambulance corps, who tried to minister to the injured, were in danger. The natives would feign death and when ambulance men would approach them would spring up and try to slash the Americans with knives. As the troops were nearing the summit of Mount Dajo many of the natives leaped over the precipice upon the troops. Some succeeded in seizing hold of the soldiers and rolling with then down the declivity. "Women fought alongside the men, and many were necessarily killed," said General Wood. Some of the men, holding children before them as shields, plunged into our bayonets and slashed the Americans with their bolos until it was impossible to segregate the inhuman enemy. I re gret the killing of women and children but it was unavoidable:" of casualties among the troops, according to General Wood, were caused by spears and krisses. Fifty-ninth Congress.

Washington, March 18. SENATE.

Mr. Scott introduced an amendment which he will offer to the railroad rate bill, providing for ample track facilities for transferring cars from one intersecting line to another, at crossings, inter-sections, etc.; providing for equal and reasonable facilities for interchange of cars and traffic; providing for switches and short road connections; providing against discrimination in rates or charges in such interchange and fixing the com terstate Commerce Commission is given power to adjust differences and parties are permitted to secure review in the circuit court.

After hearing the amendment read, the Senate took up the consideration of private bills.

Senator Simmons this afternoon addressed his colleagues on behalf of the Hepburn bill, contending that the giving of authority to the Interstate Commerce Commission to substitute a just and reasonable rate for an unjust and unepelete with exciting features, since reasonable one was entirely proper and constitutional.

He stated that it was a well known fact that certain combinations have mo-nopolized many of the prime commodities of industry and commerce, and, States, through the enormous volume of business they can give or withhold, aided by the devices of private switches, cars, refor some time past compelled the railroads to accept such compensation as they are willing to pay for the transportation of commodities in which they deal or for the traffic which they control. "This control of the big shippers," he declared, "includes not only the oil and tresh meat business of the country, but it exbusiness, the truck business and the brewing business, as well as other important lines of business."

When the railway rate bill was taken up Mr. Tillman gave notice that he would on Thursday, move to take the bill up immediately after the routine business each day, instead of having its consideration wait until 2 o'clock.
